IMAGINE
School is where our dreams are.

Every student. Every teacher. Every school.

– HPMS STUDENT BODY

HIGHLAND PARK EDUCATION FOUNDATION

hpef.org
As I prepare for this unprecedented semester of teaching, I know that Highland Park is committed to making sure this indispensable environment is preserved even in the midst of a pandemic. Education is life itself, and thankfully, our future leaders will already be prepared to undertake endeavors that we can only imagine. To do this, they need to have the experience of thinking independently and working collaboratively.

James Jenkins, Advanced 8th Grade Art, Broadcasting, Film Production, Graphic Design

I rely so much on non-verbal communication in my classes because it allows me to pivot at any moment to help my students better understand content or a skill in Spanish.

Developing lessons focused on student engagement, as well as implementing creative ways for my students to converse with each other, will be so important this year. As a foreign language team, we have spent a great deal of time discussing this, and I am confident we will be able to provide the same great experience we want for our students and families at Highland Park, in a virtual or physical space.

María del Carmen Moisés, High School Spanish

Intentionality is key in any classroom, but during the 2020 school year this word carries more importance than ever before. Ongoing collaboration will help students stay connected to me, as well as one another, ensuring all feel confident and remain positive as we move forward together.

Sylvia Bearden, 7th Grade Science

Intentionality is key in any classroom, but during the 2020 school year this word carries more importance than ever before. Ongoing collaboration will help students stay connected to me, as well as one another, ensuring all feel confident and remain positive as we move forward together.

Sylvia Bearden, 7th Grade Science

Despite the physical distance between me and my students, I am determined to be the same relationship-driven teacher I have always strived to be by closely monitoring the social and emotional needs of my students.

I rely so much on non-verbal communication in my classes because it allows me to pivot at any moment to help my students better understand content or a skill in Spanish.

Developing lessons focused on student engagement, as well as implementing creative ways for my students to converse with each other, will be so important this year. As a foreign language team, we have spent a great deal of time discussing this, and I am confident we will be able to provide the same great experience we want for our students and families at Highland Park, in a virtual or physical space.

María del Carmen Moisés, High School Spanish

Intentionality is key in any classroom, but during the 2020 school year this word carries more importance than ever before. Ongoing collaboration will help students stay connected to me, as well as one another, ensuring all feel confident and remain positive as we move forward together.

Sylvia Bearden, 7th Grade Science

Despite the physical distance between me and my students, I am determined to be the same relationship-driven teacher I have always strived to be by closely monitoring the social and emotional needs of my students.

I rely so much on non-verbal communication in my classes because it allows me to pivot at any moment to help my students better understand content or a skill in Spanish.

Developing lessons focused on student engagement, as well as implementing creative ways for my students to converse with each other, will be so important this year. As a foreign language team, we have spent a great deal of time discussing this, and I am confident we will be able to provide the same great experience we want for our students and families at Highland Park, in a virtual or physical space.

María del Carmen Moisés, High School Spanish

Intentionality is key in any classroom, but during the 2020 school year this word carries more importance than ever before. Ongoing collaboration will help students stay connected to me, as well as one another, ensuring all feel confident and remain positive as we move forward together.

Sylvia Bearden, 7th Grade Science

Despite the physical distance between me and my students, I am determined to be the same relationship-driven teacher I have always strived to be by closely monitoring the social and emotional needs of my students.

I rely so much on non-verbal communication in my classes because it allows me to pivot at any moment to help my students better understand content or a skill in Spanish.

Developing lessons focused on student engagement, as well as implementing creative ways for my students to converse with each other, will be so important this year. As a foreign language team, we have spent a great deal of time discussing this, and I am confident we will be able to provide the same great experience we want for our students and families at Highland Park, in a virtual or physical space.

María del Carmen Moisés, High School Spanish

Intentionality is key in any classroom, but during the 2020 school year this word carries more importance than ever before. Ongoing collaboration will help students stay connected to me, as well as one another, ensuring all feel confident and remain positive as we move forward together.

Sylvia Bearden, 7th Grade Science

Despite the physical distance between me and my students, I am determined to be the same relationship-driven teacher I have always strived to be by closely monitoring the social and emotional needs of my students.

I rely so much on non-verbal communication in my classes because it allows me to pivot at any moment to help my students better understand content or a skill in Spanish.

Developing lessons focused on student engagement, as well as implementing creative ways for my students to converse with each other, will be so important this year. As a foreign language team, we have spent a great deal of time discussing this, and I am confident we will be able to provide the same great experience we want for our students and families at Highland Park, in a virtual or physical space.

María del Carmen Moisés, High School Spanish

Intentionality is key in any classroom, but during the 2020 school year this word carries more importance than ever before. Ongoing collaboration will help students stay connected to me, as well as one another, ensuring all feel confident and remain positive as we move forward together.

Sylvia Bearden, 7th Grade Science

Despite the physical distance between me and my students, I am determined to be the same relationship-driven teacher I have always strived to be by closely monitoring the social and emotional needs of my students.